Non-monetary deposits must be paid before presenting a proposal for recording an increase in base capital in the business register in the manner according to paragraphs 4 to 6 of this Article.
4. If the non-monetary deposit is a moveable thing, then the subscriber is obliged to hand over the subject of deposit to the company, and to secure the acquisition of ownership rights for the company to the paid deposit. This must be done before presentation of the proposal for recording an increase in base capital into the business register.
5. If the non-monetary deposit is an immovable thing, then the subscriber is obliged, prior to presentation of proposal for an increase in base capital into the business register, to hand over to the company the subject of deposit and a written declaration with an officially authorised signature. Instead of procedure according to the previous sentences, the board of directors can either submit a complaint on the payment of issue price of shares, or possibly of its payable amount, against the subscriber who is delayed in paying it off. Alternatively, the General Meeting can decide on decreasing the base capital by relinquishing the issue of shares to the extent in which the subscribers are delayed in payment of the nominal value of shares.

9. The amount paid for paying off the issue price of shares or the value of paid non-monetary deposit is firstly counted towards the share premium. If such an amount or value does not suffice for payment of the due amount of nominal value of all subscribed shares, it is counted gradually towards payment of the due amount of nominal values of individual shares.

Article 10

Rights and obligations of shareholders

1. A shareholder is understood as being
 - a) Owner of company shares,
 - b) Owner of interim certificates of the company,
 - c) Person who has a share in base capital of the company from the day of recording the base capital in which he has a share into the business register, to the day of issue of shares or interim certificates of the company.
2. The rights and obligations of shareholders are determined by legal regulations and by these Articles of Association. A company shareholder can be a domestic or foreign corporate or physical entity.
3. The shareholder has a right to a share in company profit (dividend), which the General Meeting approved for dividing according to profit. Such a share is determined as a proportion of the nominal value of his shares to the nominal value of shares of all shareholders on the deciding day. The shareholder is not obliged to return to the company any dividend accepted in good faith. When there is doubt, good faith is assumed.
4. The amount determined to be paid out as a share of company profit must not be higher than the profit for the financial period shown on the financial statement decreased by the obligatory allocation into the contingency fund according to Article 217 paragraph 2 of the Commercial Code and on unsettled losses from previous years and increased by undivided profit from previous years and a fund created from profit that the company can use according to its own free wishes.

5. The company is not authorised to divide profit or its other own resources between shareholders, if own capital is ascertained from an ordinary or extraordinary financial statement, or if as a result of undivided profit it would be lower than the base capital of the company, increased by the following:

- a) Subscribed nominal value of shares, as long as the company shares were subscribed for an increase in base capital and the increased base capital on the day of formulation of the ordinary or extraordinary financial statement was not recorded in the business register, and
- b) That part of the contingency fund or those contingency funds, which the company may not use for payment to shareholders according to the law and the Articles of Association.

6. Unless resolved otherwise by the General Meeting, the due payment date of dividends is the day that follows two months after the day of the General Meeting taking place, which decided on the payment of dividends, and by numbered labelling is in concordance with the day of such a General Meeting taking place.

7. Unless a resolution of the General Meeting or agreement with the shareholder determine otherwise, the company is obliged to pay out dividends at its own costs and risk. It must do so to the shareholder's address administered in the records of book-registered securities of the Central Depository at the amount determined for the issuer on the deciding day. The board of directors is obliged to notify of the due date of payment of dividends, and the place and method of their payment in a manner determined for convening of the General Meeting (Article 14 paragraph 5 of these Articles of Association).

8. The right to payment of dividend is independently transferable from the day when the General Meeting decided on payment of dividends.

9. Throughout the period of the company being in existence, or even in the event of it being dissolved, the shareholder may not ask for his deposits to be returned. Payments described below are not considered as being return of deposits:

- b) When buying company shares, if the conditions determined by law are fulfilled,
- c) When returning interim certificate or declaring it as invalid,
- d) When dividing shares of the liquidation value.

11. With shares comes the right for the shareholder to take part in the management of the company. This right is enforced in principle at the General Meeting, while it must respect organisational measures regarding the conduct of general assemblies. The shareholder is authorised to take part in the General Meeting and to vote in it. He has the right to request and receive at it an explanation of matters relating to the company, if such an explanation is necessary for assessing the subject-matter of dealings at the General Meeting and to enforce proposals and counterproposals. controlled by the company. Information can be refused for reasons stated in Article 180 paragraph 4 of the Commercial Code. The explanation may be provided in the form of a collective answer on several questions of the similar scope. There is a rule, that the shareholder has been provided with an explanation even in case that the supplemental explanation to the individual points of the order of business of the General Meeting was published on the official web pages of the company at latest on the day preceding the day of holding of the General Meeting and was available to the shareholders at the place of holding of the General Meeting.

12. If a shareholder intends to enforce at the General Meeting counterproposals to proposals, the content of which is shown in the notification on the General Meeting taking place, or in the event of a notarial record having to be made on the decision of the General Meeting, the shareholder is obliged to deliver a written wording of his proposal or counterproposal to the company at least five working days before the day of the General Meeting taking place. This does not apply if it concerns proposals for the election of specific persons to company authorities. The board of directors is obliged to publicise its counterproposal with its standpoint, if possible, at least three days prior to the notified date of the General Meeting taking place. A shareholder has a right to enforce his proposals to points, which shall be included in the order of business of the General Meeting, even before publication of the invitation to the General Meeting. The board of directors publishes the proposal, which shall be delivered to the company at latest 7 days prior the publication of the invitation to the General Meeting, together with the invitation to the General Meeting. The provision of the first and second sentence hereof shall apply similarly to proposals of the shareholder delivered after the time period specified in the precedent sentence hereof.

13. The shareholder has priority right to subscribe part of the new shares of the company subscribed for increasing base capital to the extent of his share of the company's base capital, as long as the shares are subscribed by monetary deposits. This right may be restricted or excluded to the same extent for all shareholders by ruling of the General Meeting, and this may be done only in significant interest of the company.

14. A shareholder or shareholders, who has or have shares the total nominal values of which reach three percent of the company's base capital, can ask for the following:

- a) The board of directors to convene an extraordinary general meeting to discuss matters proposed by them, if each point of the order of business of the General Meeting is supplemented by an explanation or a proposed resolution,

This obligation terminates if during the same time period the shareholder has decreased or decreases his share of voting rights under the amount that founded his obligation according to this paragraph by transferring shares to another person and, therefore, stop exercising a deciding influence on the company by himself or by means of other persons. Termination of obligation is conditional in the above case upon decision of the Czech National Bank on the basis of a written request by the shareholder. The deciding share on voting rights in the company is a voting share in the company exceeding at least 30% of all votes attached to the participating securities issued by the company. Detailed rules and exceptions in fulfilling this obligation are determined by the Act No. 104/2008 Coll., on take-over bids and on amendments to some other acts (Take-over Bid Act), as amended (hereinafter the “Take-over Bid Act”); in specific cases the Czech National Bank decides at the request of the shareholder.

17. A shareholder who reaches or exceeds a share of all company voting rights of 3%, 5%, 10%, 15%, 20%, 25%, 30%, 40%, 50% or 75%, or lowers his share in all voting rights under these borderlines is obliged, within four working days after finding out about this actuality or being able to find out about this actuality, to present a notification to the company and to the Czech National Bank.
